I use a mobile phone for voice and sms.

I can use a computer for word processing and browsing the Internet.

I can create & print activity sheets & drawings for student projects.

(Yellow)

I use ICT for written communications where appropriate (eg. e-mail, attachments, sms, etc).

I can setup and enter information in a spreadsheet.

I store digital music files and can listen to music or watch movies on my iPod.

(Green)

I can communicate using a variety of appropriate technologies (e-mail, sms, chat, video, Facebook, etc) when necessary.

I can publish photos to an online album.

I can purchase music and other items online.

I understand how to publish information on the Internet.

I understand how to maintain an appropriate personal profile on the internet

(Mauve)

I am aware of new technologies that are available, but rarely use them.

I don't really have a need for much of the latest technology because there are plenty of alternatives that produce the same result.

(Red)

I can manage the technology I use and the files I create.

I use a digital camera regularly.

I manage and organise my digital photos & music.

I am able to access day-to-day info on the Internet (news, cinema times, travel bookings, podcasts, etc) and can assist others with some basic ICT questions.
